HOLY FAMILY OF JESUS, MARY AND JOSEPH

FIRST READING

Ecclesiasticus 3: 2-5, 12-14

This extract focuses on the duties of children to parents, to which Ben Sirach gave precedence among the many virtues required for fidelity in serving the Lord. It takes the commandment of honouring one's parents as the cornerstone of biblical ethics, and goes beyond it by promising not only a long and prosperous life, which was already expressed in the decalogue, but also forgiveness of sins and other blessings.

SECOND READING

Colossians 3: 12-21

The passage begins with an imagery of clothing, of dressing afresh in a beautiful outfit of qualities which blend together harmoniously. The common denominator of these qualities lies in the fact that they all refer to the domain of interpersonal relationships, and highlight many practical ways of expressing what it means to love, which itself is presented as a kind of all-enveloping cloak, binding together all the rest of one's spiritual clothing.

GOSPEL

Matthew 2: 13-15, 19-23

This passage gives us an attractively developed set of insights into Joseph as one who is continuously attentive to divine initiative and ready to respond instantly when required. Three times we notice how he responds to what has been communicated to him by means of a dream. By responding in wholehearted faith and trust to these irruptions into his consciousness Joseph is also contributing his part to having the scriptures fulfilled in a most mysterious and providential manner.
