FIFTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME 'A'

FIRST READING

Isaiah 58: 7-10

The Jews, returned from exile, believe that their political renaissance and exact legalism will result in much influence. This reading comes from a speech in which the prophet attacks the abuse and misunderstanding of fast days. He tells them that they will be a light to the nations only when they create a community of justice and sharing.

SECOND READING

1 Corinthians 2: 1-5

Last Sunday, we heard St. Paul telling the Corinthian converts that they had not been called by God to become members of Christ's Church, because of any worldly nobility or power or wealth which they had. They were called from, what the world would call them today, the "lower classes". But they were high in God's esteem. Today, he tells them that his success among them was not due to any great gifts of body or mind which he had, or dislplated. Their conversion was due not to his earthly wisdom or rhetorical powers, but to the spirit and the power of God which was made manifest among them. It is to God's power alone that they owe their faith.

GOSPEL

Matthew 5: 13-16

The two images of salt and light are used to stress the influence for good that the disciples must be in the world. To show who they are they must perform "good works". They function in such a way so that all might be brought to a greater knowledge of and love for God.
